Sangamo-Weston to fund waste damage study

By John Krukowski
Staff Writer

A study of the toxic waste damage to a portion of the Crab Orchard Wildlife Refuge in Cartersville which was once leased by Sangamo-Weston Inc. is scheduled to begin within a few days, according to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The Atlanta corporation agreed to finance the study Monday in a meeting in Washington, D.C., with representatives of the Department of the Interior and other federal agencies, according to Gerald Updike, assistant project manager at Crab Orchard.

Sangamo had operated a capacitor plant on the two-and-a-half acre site from 1946 to 1961. The site is now referred to as "Area Nine" and is located in a closed portion of the refuge. Traces of PCB and lead were found in a waste dump on the site in 1983.

The Fish and Wildlife Service received federal money to study the dump and other potentially toxic sites at the refuge last year, but put the study on hold in hopes that Sangamo would assume some financial responsibility for the project.

"We're glad to get the thing going," Updike said Thursday. "It's taken so long."

A spokesman for Sangamo-Weston in Atlanta could not be reached for comment Thursday.

Sangamo has hired the environmental engineering firm of O'Brien and Gere, based in Syracuse, New York, to determine the size, depth and exact contents of the site.

The study will be conducted under the supervision of Fish and Wildlife and in cooperation with the U.S. and Illinois Environmental Protection Agencies.

"This is just the first step in a complete package," he said.

Saturn plant ideas may aid communities

By John Krukowski
Staff Writer

The rush by Illinois communities to gather, organize, and send data on potential sites for General Motors Corp.'s Saturn plant to Springfield is over, and the dust has begun to settle.

Two men who played a part in organizing a joint proposal from Southern Illinois have slightly different ideas of what the effort means for the area.

Ray Mileur, executive director of the Murphysboro Chamber of Commerce, said the effort has acted to build more cooperation among Southern Illinois communities and should in the long run give the area "a more effective political voice."

He said he noticed a difference in the way Southern Illinois is regarded when he recently visited the Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs in Springfield.

"When you go in there and say you're representing 19 counties and 400,000 people, you get lots of respect," he said.

Mileur said the reason for submitting a joint proposal to the DECCA, rather than having each Southern Illinois community approach the agency on its own, is one of necessity.

"We have to think of a regional concept because the individual communities cannot compete on their own," Mileur said.

The advantage of a joint proposal "is that we have vast amounts of resources not available in individual cities," Mileur said.

Mileur called the proposal that was sent to Springfield "a very impressive package," and said it is being "fine-tuned" for other projects.

Mileur assisted in collecting data for the only joint proposal sent to Springfield. The sites are located in Anna, Benton, Rend Lake, Carbondale, DuQuoin, Herrin, Marion, Murphysboro, Metropolis and Mount Vernon.

The lessons learned in drawing up the proposal should act to Southern Illinois' advantage the next time the area attempts to attract industry, Mileur said.

"We're not gonna let it end here," he said. "Regardless of what General Motors decides, we're already looking to other prospects."

But Ike Kirkikis is not so sure that the area is organized enough to take on other projects.

"We don't have all the information put together yet to present a truly unified profile of Southern Illinois," said Kirkikis, executive director of the Greater Egypt Planning Commission.

Kirkikis says he would have preferred if more information could have been included in the proposal sent to the DECCA.

"To give you an example, we did not have the number of people working in industry sectors for 1984," he said.

Kirkikis says Southern Illinois needs time to gather more data about itself before it can take on another project similar to the Saturn proposal.

"If you get the reputation of putting in recommendations that are barely acceptable, you won't be taken very seriously next time," he said.

Freezing temperatures and blowing snow Thursday were not enough to stop Cindy Kretz, left, and Gayle Redinger, both sophomores in secretarial and office specialties, from trudging to class.

Higher ed budget submitted

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Gov. James Thompson proposed a $1.6 billion spending plan Thursday for Illinois public universities and colleges, winning praise from educators who in the past have quarreled with his higher education budgets.

The plan, which calls for a $128 million increase in spending from the state's general treasury, suggests raising faculty and staff salaries by 8 percent. It leaves anticipated tuition increases up to the schools.

"Education — at all levels — is the key to the future," said University of Illinois President Stanley Ikenberry. "The higher education proposals the governor has set forth today are a clear sign that Illinois sees the challenge and has reshaped its priorities."

Thompson's proposal would boost state spending on higher education starting July 1 by more than 11 percent over this year's authorized level.

"This appropriation, I believe can be accomplished within the natural growth of Illinois economy as we add jobs to our economy and the addition to our tax base of several small tax changes which I have discussed before," he said.

Kroger workers accept contract

By Lisa Eisenhauer
Staff Writer

Members of the United Food and Commercial Workers union employed by the Kroger stores in Carbondale and Murphysboro voted Thursday to accept the contract concessions requested by their employer.

A similar vote by members of the union employed by the National Food Store in Carbondale failed to decide the issue. Negotiations between union representatives and company officials were reported to be taking place Thursday afternoon.

Gene Fanker, spokesman at Kroger's division office in St. Louis, said that the decision of its union employees in Murphysboro and Carbondale to accept wage and vacation cuts, as well as other concessions, made it possible for Kroger to "stay in the marketplace" in the two cities. He added that he had not been aware of any plans to close down the three stores — two in Carbondale and one in Murphysboro — if the proposed concessions were rejected.

Union representatives for UF & CW Local 219, which represents both Kroger and National employees in talks with the company, could not be reached Thursday to comment on the extent of the concessions or the margin of voting.

Students may be able to get more money through guaranteed student loans next fall, because of a change in the application procedure.

The Guaranteed Student Loan needs test form which is required when applying for the loans will be dropped next fall, said Joseph Camille, director of Student Work and Financial Assistance.

Instead, students will have to fill out the American College Testing Family Financial Statement (ACT-FFS), which usually shows greater need, Camille said.

"Last year we did both to see which was more advantageous to students," Camille said. "In most cases the ACT-FFS showed higher need."

Eliminating the needs test form will "make it a lot less confusing," he said.

Students should pick up and fill out ACT-FFS forms as soon as possible, since they take three to four weeks for processing, said Janet Jeffries of the Student Work and Financial Assistance Office. The forms will stay on file for the 1985-86 school year.

Guaranteed Student Loan applications must be obtained at the student's bank or lending institution, Camille said.

Gus Bode

Gus says the test may be new but rejection will feel the same.

Economic index takes dip despite growth predictions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main gauge of future economic activity dipped slightly in December, but the Reagan administration and private economists discounted the waiver and maintained the economy is poised for above-average growth in coming months. Many economists discounted the significance of the decline, saying the weak index was running counter to other signals that the economy rebounded strongly in the closing months of 1984.

South African leader offers to release activist

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — President P.W. Botha announced Thursday that the government would free black activist Nelson Mandela if he agreed to renounce violence. Mandela, South Africa's most prominent opponent of white minority rule, has served 20 years of a life sentence. However, initial reaction by blacks suggested Mandela was not likely to accept it. Ismail Ayob, Mandela's lawyer, said: "I can't imagine his looking at his own release to the exclusion of what he believes in."

Soviet leader condemns Star Wars program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko, in a direct challenge to President Reagan, condemned the U.S. "Star Wars" program Thursday as an "aggressive concept" designed to achieve U.S. military superiority over the Soviet Union. In an interview with Cable News Network, the Soviet leader said "to put it simply, the aim is to acquire a capability to deliver a nuclear strike counting on impunity."

Prices paid to farmers decreased in January

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prices farmers get for raw products declined 0.7 percent in January and averaged below year-earlier levels for the second consecutive month, the Agriculture Department said Thursday. Meanwhile, the prices farmers paid in January held steady for the seventh consecutive month, said the department's Crop Reporting Board. But those still averaged 0.6 percent above their year-earlier levels. The department says food prices in 1985 could increase an additional 2 percent to 5 percent.

Scientists progress toward an AIDS vaccine

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Scientists have for the first time identified an antibody that inactivates the AIDS virus in laboratory experiments, a step toward development of an AIDS vaccine, a researcher said Thursday. However, considerable research must be done to determine whether the antibody will destroy the virus in the human body as effectively as it destroys it in the laboratory before it will be known if a vaccine is possible.

Nuclear reactor's start-up postponed another day

CHICAGO (AP) — Commonwealth Edison's No. 1 Byron nuclear reactor, its start-up postponed for six years by construction delays and an operating license denial, experienced yet another setback Thursday when engineers requested an extra day to put it in operation. Byron's Unit 1 originally was scheduled to start up in May 1979, with Unit 2 to follow in March 1980. When plans for the facility were drawn up in 1972, the projected cost was set at $902 million. The cost currently is estimated at $4.18 billion, said an Edison spokesman, Paul Bleers.

Blood pressure may be altered by diet change

CHICAGO (AP) — Losing weight and cutting down on salt may allow many people with high blood pressure to stop taking medicine completely after they have relied on it for years, a new study says. After studying 496 people for 56 weeks whose blood pressure had been controlled with medication for about five years, researchers discovered that those who lost weight or reduced sodium in their diets were two to three times more likely to have normal blood pressure than those who did not.

No smoking rule set for new hospital

CHICAGO (AP) — A suburban hospital will weed out smokers by refusing to hire them as new employees in a program believed to be the first of its kind in the nation. Westlake Community Hospital, in west suburban Melrose Park, will not hire new employees who smoke cigarettes, pipes or cigars. Current workers who smoke are not affected.

City receives good grades on industry service survey

By Bob Tita
Staff Writer

While industries and businesses in Carbondale are generally satisfied with the community, more can be done to accommodate economic development, according to a survey conducted by the Carbondale Industrial Corp., a group that promotes industrial growth in the city.

The survey indicated that most of the community services are "suitable" to the 17 manufacturing and service companies that responded to the survey. Utilities, labor and transportation services were given good or adequate ratings.

James Prowell, secretariat for the CIC, said the survey was conducted to help identify the strengths and weaknesses of Carbondale as a location for businesses and industries.

"When people bring their needs to the surface then we can deal with them," said Prowell, who is also executive director of the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce.

He said the members of the CIC have been assigned to investigate the deficiencies that Carbondale poses for businesses and industries.

Franklyn Moreno, economic development director for Carbondale, is working with those companies that said they were concerned about the financial assistance available in the city. Moreno said he advises company officials on the private financing in Carbondale.

He said he also explains funding possibilities from state and federal agencies, such as Urban Development Action Grants from Housing and Urban Development and the grants from the Illinois Community Development Assistance Program.

Prowell said that a CIC member is also working with problems in the city's codes. He said communication between city administrators and companies can alleviate some of the problems concerning codes.

The results of the survey said that:

— Eleven companies reported that the quality of local government was good or adequate.

— Eleven companies said the quality of general labor was adequate. Three companies felt the quality of general labor was good.

— Four companies said they had plans to expand at their present locations. Eleven companies said they do not plan to expand.

— Eleven companies said they would locate in Carbondale again. Four companies reported they would not.

Meese not unethical, ethics official says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's chief ethics officer said Thursday that Attorney General-designate Edwin Meese III did not break ethics rules, and an assistant who had initially concluded there were violations said, "I probably misconstrued the facts."

Director David H. Martin of the Office of Government Ethics, appearing at Meese's confirmation hearing, told the Senate Judiciary Committee he was "totally satisfied that Meese was in compliance with conflict of interest laws."

But Archibald Cox, the president of the lobbying group Common Cause and another witness at the hearing, called Martin's conclusions "incredible," "unbelievable" and "frightening."

Martin, an appointee of President Reagan, said, "I had no reason from anyone regarding this matter."

Martin's conclusion of no violation came after he showed his assistants' preliminary report to Fielding and permitted Meese's lawyers to file a formal response.

But the director insisted "it's my standard practice" to contact an agency's ethics officer — Fielding in the case of the White House — and to allow an employee or his attorney to respond to allegations.

On the third day of the hearings, the first without Meese present, senators pried open the normally secret deliberations of the ethics office, which polices the conduct of 110,000 federal employees.

GPSC approves new pesticide policy draft

By David Liss
Staff Writer

A blanket of snow covers Thompson Woods now, but come spring, when it is time to spray bagworms and honeysuckle again, a new University pesticide policy will probably be in effect.

A draft of such a policy was passed unanimously by the Graduate and Professional Student Council last week. It currently awaits approval by SIU-C President Albert Somit.

The latest draft requires "notification of times and locations of special applications" to be published "at least one week in advance of spraying," a policy not followed during the spraying of Thompson Woods last summer.

The draft also states that a member of the Campus Natural Areas Committee must be present during spraying operations and that affected areas must be roped off for one hour before and after spraying.

The CNAC is to annually define which applications are special and which are routine, according to the draft.

Somit said the new policy must be cleared by the SIU-C Legal Counsel before he approves it. That could occur within a week, CNAC Chairman Robert Mohlenbrock said Wednesday.

The new draft addresses the GPSC's concerns and is "general enough to be flexible," said GPSC Vice President Nancy Bandy said Thursday.

The new policy is a direct result of the controversy raised last spring and summer over the spraying of the herbicide Roundup on Thompson Woods. Roundup was used to kill honeysuckle, which was strangling trees and other plant life.

The spraying was part of an effort to clean up and thin out Thompson Woods for reforestation.

Physical Plant workers began the cleanup in October 1983 by pulling the honeysuckle out by hand, but the work was stopped by John Guyon, vice president for academic affairs, amid protests from the GPSC and forestry, botany and plant and soil science departments.

Funding of Attucks still not adequate

WHEN TIMES ARE TOUGH economically, social services funding usually suffers. The Carbondale City Council, as the grantor of such funds, has showed that there will be no end to that tradition.

The Attucks Community Service Board is the latest victim. The Attucks Board provides valuable services to the community. For example, many residents of the northeast side of the city can't take advantage of day care elsewhere. The Attucks Board also conducts youth and tutoring programs, services that probably wouldn't otherwise be available to residents of the northeast side.

Just as important, these programs help provide a feeling of community for the residents of the northeast side. In short these services are vital and worth supporting.

Services provided by Attucks have eroded since it's beginnings over fifteen years ago. One by one, services have gone by the wayside.

THE CITY COUNCIL CONTINUED in that vein by approving the same level of funding for the Attucks Board as in 1984. In other words, the run-down facilities and limited programs will remain that way.

The services handled by Attucks would not be better handled by the park district and the school district as suggested in a city report. The residents of northeast Carbondale need the community identity that the Eurma Hayes Center and the Attucks Board provide.

Some of the programs run by the park district and the school districts, and the Attucks Board seem to overlap. A co-sponsorship of some of these programs by the districts and Attucks would be a better solution to the problem than shutting down Attucks altogether; which is what will happen by Nov. 1 if no other funding can be found.

Councilman Keith Tuxhorn suggested that the city use unspent capital improvement funds to help out the Attucks Board. Either proposal — or a combination of the two — would be preferable to holding the line at the same inadequate amount.

If the city does take the step of committing more funds to Attucks in the future, they do have a legitimate interest in knowing more about how the funds are spent. Regular reports from Attucks officials could only help their case when they ask for more money, provided they do a good job. It would provide an opportunity to show how valuable they are.

The city acknowledges that the services provided by Attucks are worth preserving. But just as important is preserving the accessibility of the services to residents of the northeast side by keeping them in the Hayes Center.

Pepsi machines a gyp

On Jan. 25 I read with interest the story about the new vending machines. There seems to be a story not told by the article. The new machines are of an interesting design. Once these new machines capture your money there is no way to retrieve it. In technical terms they have no escrow change unit.

At the same time there is no little red light to tell you a specific soda is sold out. It should be noted that you can push your choice before putting your money in and the new machine will beep if your selection is sold out. This, however, not the way most people use a soda machine.

Once you place your money in one of these new machines, you are at the mercy of that machine. Whether there is a human error or a machine error, the machine wins. Once your money is in a specific machine you no longer have a choice. You take what it has to offer.

Even if the machine next to yours has what you want, you cannot get your money back to even try the new "cola roulette" on a different machine. This may not sound all that bad but what about a diabetic who puts money in one of the new machines and is surprised to find only sugar sweetened sodas?

They will be forced to purchase something that could kill them. An interesting variation on Russian Roulette, except that in this case it's the unloaded machine that is dangerous. The one in our building has been empty for three days, so obviously they aren't being filled each day.

Interesting isn't it? The University is going to make more money on the machines. Interstate United is going to make more money too, since you can't get your money back. Guess who loses — Richard Archer, Assistant Professor, Design.

Arms talks a ploy of evil Soviets

I'm writing in response to Karen Greenberg's letter in the Jan. 28 Daily Egyptian. Her letter said deployment of the Trident II submarine was a mistake. Karen, your letter was a mistake.

For the last three years I have been cracking open the D.E. to read letters such as yours. You have the right idea, we should do away with nuclear weapons. But if and only if the Soviet Union and every other country that has them does. That is what makes your letter and every one like them so funny.

You people obviously know nothing about history and nothing about the Soviet Marxist-Leninist government. These people do not care if they have arms control or not. They're going to go on building weapons anyway. The Soviet government has had an ultimate goal since it has been in existence.

That goal is to one day see the fall of capitalism so they can rule the world. It sounds crazy but pick up any book on Soviet ideology and you'll find this same theme. Here is a quote by Lenin who, along with Karl Marx, developed today's Soviet ideology:

"We must be clever enough by relying on the peculiarities of the capitalist world and exploiting the greed of the capitalists for raw materials, to extract from it such advantages as will strengthen our position — however strange this may appear among the capitalists."

The Soviets have been practicing this theory since World War II. We, the capitalists, have literally been giving them information and technology for the last 40 years, and all that time they have been waiting for the fall of the capitalist form of government.

Sounds crazy but that is the kind of people we are dealing with. Hell, they are deliberately starving people in Ethiopia to get their way. The Soviets love to make arms control agreements but they rarely abide by them. The only reason they want to talk is maybe to get us to slow down so they can catch up.

That's why they don't want us to develop weapons in space, because they don't have them and we will. As long as we stay ahead of them we are safe. If we ever fall behind or become equal we will be in trouble. So before you anti-nuclear people write your next letter, I hope you pick up a book on the Soviet Union and read it because every time you write letters, people who know anything about the Soviets pity you for your ignorance. — Jim Hackman, Plant and Soil Science.

Theft the product of 'anything goes' attitude

On Friday, Jan. 25, my band played at a party at 309 W. Walnut. It was our first time out and things went OK for most of the night; that is until someone ripped the power-meter from the side of the house, causing all the lights to go out. While the lights were out, someone made off with two cords and my brand new Ibanez distortion box.

I'm mad as hell. We played a party for free to entertain a bunch of people and this is the thanks we get. It's a sad commentary on the "anything goes" party atmosphere that culminates once a year at Halloween. Having fun doesn't entail destroying things and helping oneself to someone's private possessions.

I'm no rock'n'roll star. I'm a student, and as bad off financially as anyone else. I can ill afford to spend another $50 for a distortion box, just because someone liked the way it sounded. To whomever did this: I hope you feel gratified with yourself. If you have the slightest shred of conscience or decency, you'll look me up and give it back! — Jerry Renshaw, senior, Radio and Television.

Damages rebate 'generous'

Being students living in Neely Hall, we were extremely pleased to learn that the University Housing officials have taken measures to compensate for the loss of electricity and heating we experienced for 53 hours. Each student on East Campus is going to get a grand total of $1 taken off of their damage assessments at the end of the semester.

We didn't realize that SIUC possessed the deep generosity and compassion to make such a costly sacrifice. That dollar rebate made going all those hours without heat and electricity seem worthwhile. We would like to make a proposal. Why not turn the power off of all University Housing for the rest of the semester and give each student about $10 or so? Why not shut the water off and add about another $5? We could do away with the entire damages fee. — Brad Hummert, sophomore, Engineering, and Richard Robben, sophomore, Computer Science.

Letters Policy

Signed articles, including letters, Viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Committee, whose members are the student-editor-in-chief, the editorial page editor, a news staff member, the faculty managing editor and a Journalism School faculty member.

Letters to the editor may be submitted by mail or directly to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten, double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 500 words. Letters of less than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters submitted by mail should include the author's address and telephone number. Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

The battle to comply with Title IX

ADDRESSING ISSUES seemingly as mundane as laundry to those as complex as facets of budget accounting. Title IX reviews by the U.S. Department of Education Office of Civil Rights have brought about changes in athletic programs.

In a letter dated Dec. 18, 1984, OCR advised Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, of the status of SIU-C's plan for compliance with Title IX.

OCR's evaluation of SIU-C's report noted the program areas in which SIU-C is no longer required to report. The evaluation also noted three areas in which SIU-C will be required to report for the 1984-85 academic year: athletic financial assistance, travel and per diem, and the recruitment program.

After the OCR completed its 1982 review spanning 13 areas, SIU-C was required to report on progress in seven areas of non-equivalence and four areas of concern.

THE OCR stated, "We congratulate the University for the actions noted above in the evaluation of specific program areas to move toward equivalence of benefits and opportunities for men and women in the University's intercollegiate athletics program."

Swinburne said, "We had been moving toward these things before the hearings. We had a commitment to equality that goes back way before Title IX, and I think people can take pride in that."

Charlotte West, director of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women, disagreed.

"I would take public issue on that. I can assure him that without the federal mandate it just wouldn't have happened," she said.

"I've seen these long-term changes," said West, who has the longest tenure in athletics of anyone on campus, having been involved since 1957.

West credited former University President Hiram Lesar with moving women's athletics forward and said the program has continued to grow under President Somit.

West said, "But prior to that, those were dark years."

AFTER TITLE IX was approved in 1972, a three-year period was established to allow time for interpretation of the new law. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare, for which West was a Title IX consultant, sent a team to SIU-C because the women's program was considered progressive.

Two national championships in golf in 1968 and gymnastics in 1970 had been achieved by SIU-C women's teams without obtaining a single student fee dollar. IAW first received funding through intercollegiate athletics in 1972 when SIU-C granted it 3.66 percent of the total athletics budget. IAW produced another national title in gymnastics in 1974 when it was allocated only 3.08 percent of the budget.

By 1975 federal guidelines were established and universities were given three years to comply.

"They said, 'these three years should be years of activity, not a waiting period,'" West said. "It was kind of wait and go slowly. I tried to impress that it did not help the hundreds of women here then."

THE SIU-C student athletics fee was raised to $20 in 1975 to increase funding for the support of the women's athletic program. The increase brought the IAW share of the intercollegiate athletics budget to 13.66 percent.

West and Doug Weaver, director of men's athletics at that time, agreed to devise a plan which would not be a shock to men's athletics, West said.

"Had we filed a plan then, we could have had an orderly change. I've tried to be sensitive to the position of the men. None of us like to give up our tightly guarded dollars, especially if we feel we don't have enough in the first place," West said.

Review's conclusion draws mixed reactions

University administrators have diverse opinions on the conclusions of the Office of Civil Rights' examination of SIU-C's Title IX compliance plan for intercollegiate athletics.

Glenn Stolar, president of the Graduate and Professional Student Council said, "Yes, progress has been made, but no, we're not to equity. We're close, but not as close as the media — especially the SIU Courier — have led people to believe."

Lew Hartzog, director of Intercollegiate Athletics for Men, said, "We're close. I like the fact that the SIU-C administration has made a commitment to bring women's athletics forward as fast as possible."

Nancy Bandy, assistant director for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women, said, "It depends on your definition of equity."

OCR found two areas of inequity between funding in men's and women's athletics: recruitment and travel and per diem. SIU-C will be required to report progress in those areas and an on-going report is required on federal financial assistance.

Seven areas of non-equivalence and four areas of concern were cited after an investigation in 1982, and OCR commended SIU-C for moving those specific program areas toward equity.

"It's not been easy, but we're in better shape than I thought we'd be, overall," said Marian Davis, acting affirmative action officer.

Stolar reiterated his concern that Title IX was passed in 1972.

"We had constantly been told as student leaders that increases in the student athletics fee were to achieve equity. Now it's 1985 and we're not there yet," Stolar said.

Bruce Swinburne, vice president of Student Affairs said, "The monies were put in as rapidly as women's athletics could use them. If this had been done any faster, the money couldn't have been used."

However, SIU-C gave IAW permission to provide pre- and post-game meals, but Charlotte West, director of IAW, said that sufficient funds were not available.

"You can spend money for meals, up to $15 there is permission to do it. But if there aren't enough dollars to do all the things permissible, we have to make our choices," West said.

The division of monies for compliance with Title IX is determined by the number of participants in men's and women's athletics. Bandy said the OCR did not ask for documentation on the number of participants for the report.

West said, "There was an altering of the definition originally agreed upon. Like a lot of other things, we finally worked it out, but I felt we should have gone with what we originally decided upon."

OCR specified that SIU-C must make more reports on travel and per diem. Officials agree that the disparity centers on the budget of one team — men's basketball.

Hartzog said, "It's an internal problem, something I have to take care of. It's a recruiting thing, too. You're forced to do as the Joneses do."

Recruitment costs for men's football and basketball are high, meaning women's recruitment budgets must increase to achieve equity.

Hartzog said, "Until there's a professional league like the NBA for women's basketball, it will never come to the same level. Professional sports causes the difference there."

Swinburne said the University is adding $7,500 per year to the IAW budget for recruiting and the area will reach equivalence by fiscal year 1986.

The GPSC still has questions about the current budget, Stolar said. He also votes on the Intercollegiate Athletic Advisory Committee which favored making athletics budgets "follow generally accepted accounting principles" for more accurate budget comparisons.

"The University's commitment, I believe, is there, but we can't let the fact that the OCR report does not require follow-ups mean we shouldn't stop reviewing these areas internally," Stolar said.

'Twist' plans homecoming concert

By Bill Walker
Entertainment Editor

It's a hard-driving rhythm and blues band from Chicago. It's also a Carbondale legend. It's Big Twist and the Mellow Fellows, returning to Carbondale for the first time since Halloween, 1983.

"We're real anxious to be coming back to Carbondale," said band member Pete Special, discussing the band's upcoming Sunday night concert at Gatsby's. "Carbondale is home for us."

Carbondale is where the group was formed about 12 years ago. Special and saxophonist Terry Ogolini, then working together on the Strip in Carbondale, met Larry "Twist" Nolan, a black musician who had been playing in redneck bars throughout Southern Illinois since the late 1950s.

The three got together at Lyrin' Sams, a honky-tonk in Buckner, where Twist was playing, Special said. After establishing a friendship and sitting in with each other's bands, they decided to form what is now Big Twist and the Mellow Fellows.

They borrowed the name from Twist's older brother's former band, Special said. The Mellow Fellows was a house band in the 1950s at Junior's in Colb.

Colb is hardly what anyone would call a bustling metropolis, or even a large town for that matter. In the '50s, its population was only about 200 people.

But in its day, Colb was a rhythm and blues hotspot, Special said. It was a stopover for traveling rhythm and blues bands.

"B.B. King, Ike and Tina Turner, all the major rhythm and blues bands would pass through Colb," Special said.

Today, Big Twist and the Mellow Fellows continue the rhythm and blues tradition, but the band is by no means locked into a particular category. Their performances have been known to include everything from jazz standards such as "Killer Joe" and "Misty," to soul favorites "Turn Back the Hands of Time" and "Ain't No Sunshine," and Beatles' music.

According to a review of the band by music critic Neil Tesser in the Chicago Sun-Times a few years ago, "These guys can spread out all over the map."

Literally, the band also covers much of the map, touring extensively throughout the United States and Canada. They have also released three record albums and have another in the planning stages, which they hope will be ready by late spring, Special said.

Chicago is now the band's operations base, but Special emphasized how much Carbondale means to all of the band members.

"We're real happy to be coming home," he said.

'Members' destined to be a classic

By Belinda Edmondson
Staff Writer

Theater lovers of SIU-C: drop whatever you're doing this weekend and go to McLeod Theater. "The Member of the Wedding," a play surely earmarked for classic status, is being performed there with a forcefulness and "oomph" that seems almost unnatural in amateur theater.

The verve of the performances seems the result of something more than just practice. If the emotional discharge of Wednesday's performance is anything to go by, the cast is not just taking this play seriously, it's taking it personally.

Carson McCuller's semi-autobiographical novel about a Southern adolescent's growing pains was first staged on Broadway in 1949. Though the novel was an enormous success with the public, it met with mixed reviews in literary circles. Some critics derided it as having no internal structure ("The whole story seems utterly pointless," sniffed Book Week), while others saw the characters in simplistic terms.

In time the literary world caught up with the masses, and now hails the novel as writing of the highest caliber. The increasing respect with which the novel is being viewed is mirrored in the changing perceptions of the second central character, Berenice.

In 1949 she was considered to be important only as Frankie's "sympathetic friend," the "gentle, warm-hearted Negro servant" who was out of her league in their philosophical discussions. Today, however,

Berenice is being studied as as the fascinating, complex figure that she is; a black woman who has come to terms with her restricted place in society, who has wrestled with her demons and conquered them.

Perhaps more interesting than the characters themselves are the relationships between them. The bond between Berenice and Frankie is not just a maternal kind; it is spiritual. Shirlene Holmes and Regina Pugh, who both put in first-rate performances as Berenice and Frankie, communicate an emotional connection to the audience that seems to go beyond their stage personas.

The lesser roles were also performed in excellent fashion. Nate Bynum in particular stands out as Berenice's younger brother, Honey, a volatile young man suffocating in the oppressive racism of the South. In the confrontation scene between Honey and Frankie's father (R. Brent Lappin), the tension onstage is electrifying.

If one wants to split hairs, here is one: though Pugh is outstanding as Frankie, she just barely misses that indefinable air of innocence that follows twelve-year-olds around. This is perhaps unavoidable: it may be an impossibility for a grown woman to capture the aura of a little girl.

Tickets for the play, which runs through Feb. 3, are available at the theater box office in the Communications Building, and cost $4 and $5.

Execution rate in United States accelerates

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the past 20 years, executions in the nation were rarities. Now they occur, on average, once every 10 days — and that rate is speeding up.

James David Raulerson, who died in Florida's electric chair Wednesday, was the fifth person executed in the United States this year.

Law enforcement officials are reluctant to predict how many condemned murderers will die this year, but scores of death row inmates are perilously close to losing their battles to stay alive.

There were 11 executions in the first seven years after the Supreme Court in 1976 allowed states to reinstate capital punishment. In the last 21 weeks, however, there were 15.

AT FIRST, time was on the side of the inmates. There was only one execution in 1977; none in 1978; two in 1979; none in 1980; one in 1981; two in 1982; and five in 1983.

Post office phone will help service for deaf patrons

By Pete Rhodes
Student Writer

A new telecommunications service has been added by the U.S. Postal Service in Washington, D.C., to aid deaf customers who want to call in with inquiries or complaints about their mail service.

Any customer who has access to telecommunications device for the deaf can directly call the U.S. Postal Service Consumer Advocate at (202) 245-3858.

The device, which has a keyboard similar to a typewriter, sends and receives electronic signals that are converted into typewritten messages. Ron Blosser, coordinator of Disabled Student Services at SIU-C, said there are two or three totally deaf and about 15 partially deaf students who may have need for the service.

The device was in the Postal Service office in Washington, D.C., largely because John Passarella, a deaf letter carrier in Garden City, N.Y., wrote to the Postmaster General, William F. Bolger, and asked that the service be installed to aid deaf people in communicating a complaint about their mail service. Before the service was installed, the only way a deaf person could complain to the U.S. Postal Service Consumer Advocate's office about the mail service was through the mail.

Postal Consumer Advocate, Thomas W. Chadwick said, "Our job is to hear people out, get them help with their concerns, and, when necessary, cause the Postal Service to change internally."

But last year, states put to death 21 inmates. Now, in the first 30 days of 1985, five have been executed.

A sixth inmate who was scheduled for execution Wednesday in Florida was granted an indefinite stay Tuesday by the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta.

"Time seems to be catching up" to the nation's more than 1,400 death row inmates, said Stephen Schlesinger, director of the federal government's Bureau of Justice Statistics.

"IT'S VERY difficult to predict. But it's quite possible we'll have a relatively large number of executions" from now on, he said.

The increase has been welcomed by law enforcement officials who argue that the death penalty is more likely to deter crime if enforced regularly.

"I can't prove it, but I believe it," said Georgia Attorney General Michael Bowers.

The Supreme Court, expressing growing impatience with an appeals process that has helped keep hundreds of death row prisoners alive years after their convictions, has played an important role in the current speedup.

IN JULY 1983, the justices ruled that federal appeals courts may take shortcuts to reject last-ditch efforts to postpone executions. The court said an appeals panel — rather than routinely postponing executions — may deny a postponement by deciding that the issues in the underlying appeal are without merit.

The decision came two years after Justice William H. Rehnquist had denounced "endlessly drawn out legal proceedings" that he said made "a mockery of our criminal justice system."

Richard Brody of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, an organization that is opposed to the death penalty and represents numerous death row inmates, conceded there is little likelihood of change soon in what he called the Supreme Court's "let's get on with it" attitude.

BRODY CAUTIONED, however, that it would be "irresponsible" to forecast the pace of executions. "Our predictions (in individual cases) are wrong 90 percent of the time," he said.

But the mere passage of time could fuel the trend of increasingly frequent executions, as more and more inmates exhaust legal appeals.

An overwhelming majority of Americans supports capital punishment, and it is anyone's guess whether that public sentiment will change if executions become significantly more frequent.

Although 38 states now have penalty laws, executions since 1976 have occurred in just 12 states — Utah, Florida, Nevada, Indiana, Virginia, Texas, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Georgia, North Carolina and South Carolina.

Gray introduces legislation to ease VA claims process

By John Krukowski
Staff Writer

U.S. Rep. Ken Gray introduced legislation Wednesday which will attempt to give veterans easier access to judicial review of benefit decisions made by the Veterans Administration.

"During the 20 years I was here in Washington before, we received numerous calls from veterans complaining about the Veteran's Administration Judicial Review Board," Gray said.

The 22nd District representative said most of the veterans were complaining about the "assembly line" manner in which claims involving VA errors were handled. Gray says that veterans would be better served if they were allowed to appeal claims on their own, rather than having to depend upon the VA to represent them in court.

Veterans lost their right to appeal in 1935, according to Gray press aide Patrick McCaffrey, when the federal government determined that they "had no right to benefits and had no access to judicial review."

McCaffrey says no protest was made at the time because there were comparatively few veterans and veterans were "not highly esteemed."

Veterans lost more appeal claims rights with the 1946 Administrative Procedures Act, which required the judicial review of benefit decisions by all federal administrative agencies but the VA, McCaffrey said.

What has resulted, according to Gray, is a rather one-sided access to judicial review.

"If the government thinks they've sent a veteran too much money," Gray said, "they can get the U.S. attorney to drag him into court."

The veterans themselves have no such recourse, Gray said.

The Veterans Administration Adjudication Procedure and Judicial Review Act would restore the right of veterans to appeal benefit decisions of the Veterans Administration in federal courts, McCaffrey said.

The act would also remove the current $10 limit on fees for attorneys, which was set in 1924. McCaffrey says the VA approved the limit because "they thought they were protecting veterans from exorbitant legal fees."

Gray says it will have taken approximately 50 years to reverse the limits put on veterans' right to judicial review because "the squeaky wheel gets the grease" and veterans haven't been very vocal until recently.

A similar bill was introduced in the House last year by Reps. John LaFolce, D-N.Y., and Don Edwards, D-Calif. The legislation passed the Senate but "was bottled-up in committee" because of budget concerns, McCaffrey said.

He predicted the bill will have a better chance of being made law this time around because it has been introduced early in the congressional session and has already picked up 89 co-sponsors.

Gray said the bill has a "50-50" chance of passage because it lacks the support of the Reagan administration, although he feels his recent appointment to the House Veterans Committee might give him some added leverage.

State may pay half of school cost

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Two Democratic lawmakers Thursday proposed a constitutional amendment requiring the state to pay more than half of public school costs, but they stopped short of endorsing a tax increase to go with it.

Sen. Vince Demuzio and Rep. Jim McPike unveiled the proposal with the backing of the Illinois Education Association, a teacher union that is one of the capital's most influential lobbying groups, and called it the "cornerstone" of education reform efforts this year.

The amendment also says the state "shall, as needed, raise the rate of taxation of one or more taxes ... or institute new sources of taxation" to come up with the required money.

Dining in Carbondale

Carbondale offers the opportunity to experience a diversity of international cuisine, right here in Southern Illinois. Beginning on the far east side of town there's Poncho's Villa, an authentic Mexican restaurant, offering a mixture of Mexican, American and Seafood. Next to the University Mall is Western Sizzlin, specializing in juicy steaks. Over on Walnut St. is Taco Bell, a favorite among Carbondale's late-night set, serving up Mexican fare. JR's, next door to the Holiday Inn, serves breakfast, lunch and dinner in a quiet, relaxed atmosphere. A block west of S. Illinois Ave. is Papa's Pub and Deli, a new pub with a comfortable, familiar feel. Down the strip is All Baba's specializing in Arabian-American food. Finally, on the far west side is Kahala Gardens in the Murdale Shopping Center, offering a variety of exotic Chinese dishes. For an out-of-the-ordinary experience, try one of these fine establishments tonight!

Travel-study of Greek isles traces growth of civilization

By Pamela Tober
Student Writer

Robert Hahn says this year's travel-study to Greece is both a physical journey through the Greek isles and an intellectual exploration of a series of transitions in the mentality of a civilization.

Hahn, philosophy professor at SIU-C, is the U.S. director and originator of the national program, now in its 5th year.

The seminar, under the theme, "Discovering the Idea of Humanity," will begin May 12 and continue through June 2. The group will visit six locations for three to four days at each, on the mainland and the islands of Greece, Hahn said.

Program participants will play the roles of archeologists, biologists and artists, engaging in activities to recreate experiences that will help to connect diverse aspects of the civilization.

The course begins in Athens, focusing on the idea of humanity in the Classical period, then proceeds in chronological order beginning with the Mycenaean civilization in the Peloponnese.

The group will visit Turkey and the site of ancient Troy. Participants will examine the Archaic period and early history of science while travelling along the coast of Turkey and on to Samos to study architecture and early technology.

The program is team-taught by a faculty of experts from the United States and Europe, who work to create an intellectual community so that participants may interact in on-going research, Hahn said.

The Parthenon in Athens, Greece, is one of the historical sites to be studied by the travel group this summer.

Hahn began the program while on leave from teaching at Harvard and Brandeis. He had accepted an invitation to Athens as a visiting professor in 1980. There he taught ancient philosophy for 6 months and with the collaboration of two other colleagues, brought together the first program.

"We tried to recreate a series of remarkable events which proved historically decisive for our own understanding of the meaning of being human," Hahn said.

The next year, he introduced and developed the program at Dennison University in Ohio. Each year there is a variation of the basic theme which "isolates the moment in which human beings discovered that they were the only creatures whose identity consists in questioning their own existence," Hahn said.

"Basically we offer a chance to go to Greece, think through an idea, engage in a little self-exploration, and give seminar members a chance to put these elements together for themselves," Hahn said.

The trip offers in-depth study for most subjects and is available for 2-5 course credits. The program is open to the general public.

Organizational meetings for this year's program will be held at noon Feb. 6, and at 7 p.m. Thursday in Faner 2006. For more information call Professor Hahn at the Philosophy Department, 536-6641.

Beef discarded after complaints

By Tom Atkins
Staff Writer

Beef valued at $600 was thrown out at Grinnell Hall Tuesday after student workers complained that the meat that was to be used for dinner had a bad odor.

Lois Brumitt, director of residence hall food service, said she inspected the meat herself after she heard the complaints from student workers. She said that she could detect nothing wrong with the meat, but decided to throw out the 400 pounds of beef anyway because of the number of complaints she had received.

Sam Rinella, director of University Housing, said that a reimbursement from the distributor who delivered the meat would be requested. There was no shortage of meat for dinner Tuesday evening because the dining halls keep about 10 days supply on hand, he said.

A complaint was made to Jim Bloom of the Jackson County Health Department by a student who heard reports of spoiled beef from workers in the kitchen. The complaint was then relayed to the University.

Disposal of the spoiled meat was completed before health officials had contacted the University and reported the complaint, Brumitt said.

Carbondale police officer Chuck Doan casts a glance into the back seat of a squad car.

Ride along program offers closer look at police work

By Jane Grandolfo
Staff Writer

Chuck Doan drove west down Main Street, and turned slowly into the parking lot at Murdale Shopping Center. It was overcast and cold outside, but Doan in a thick, worn-looking brown leather police jacket, kept the window slightly cracked.

"This is my first night back in a while, so sometimes I forget I'm patrolling," he said. "Other times I'll be off duty and driving in my Honda and I'll reach over for my beam light, and it's not there."

Doan, who seemed comfortable sharing the front seat of the patrol car with an observer, said he has already taken a few passengers along since the Ride-Along program started two months ago. "For the most part on uniformed patrol, you just cruise," he explained. "High visibility is in some views, a deterrent to crime."

GADGETRY in the form of switches and microphones jut out of the floor like a cab driver's taxi meter. He points, "This one is for the rotating red light, this is the wig-wag light and this is the flood light."

A girl walking her dog waved at Doan. He smiled and waved back. His neatly combed blond hair and boyish looks hid his 29 years. He admitted he gets ribbed for his young looks and college kids question his authority. In fact, Doan has been with the Carbondale police force for seven and a half years.

There were no shoot-outs, no bank robbers and no murders in District 30 on the cold afternoon in January, but Doan wasn't short on war stories. He remembers well the grisly scene he encountered the first time he investigated a suicide on the northwest side of town.

BUY TUESDAY night, the excitement consisted of driving slowly through the traffic and talking about the fine art of making a perfect pizza crust. "...there's no way to make good pizza crust in a pan, it's gotta be crispy on the bottom and moist in the middle..."

"3330 you got a fire call at the Egyptian dorms." the voice crackled over his radio.

Doan was unphased by the dispatcher's fire call. "All we usually do is guard the fire trucks, or if the fire was of suspicious origin I'd have to collect evidence," he said. Usually it's a false alarm, he said. This time he was right.

"YOU KNOW, you can make this job a lot more safe by using your better judgement." It's a matter of priorities, he said. "My first priority is me. My life and my health. Then it's the innocent victim's."

"If I don't protect myself and I get blown away, then what is that innocent victim gonna do with me laying on the ground? If I'm disabled I won't be able to help this person," he said.

Glancing at his rifle, hung on a rack behind his head, he said, "The thought of using your firearm, that's pretty damn serious. I hope I never, never have to use that thing."

"THE LAST person shot by a police officer in Carbondale was at Denny's in 1972," he recalled. A man had opened fire in a restaurant full of people, so the police officer "had no choice but to shoot," he said.

Although the officer later received commendation for his action that night, the shoot-out took its toll on him. Doan said. "Psychologically it messed him up so bad he had to quit. He never did go back to street work. He just changed totally after that."

By about 7 p.m. snow was starting to fall heavily. Doan received a call from the dispatcher; a man had jumped out of the bushes on South Poplar Street and flashed a weapon.

AFTER GETTING a description of the suspect, Doan went in search of the flasher. Shining his brights through snow covered bushes, it seemed hopeless. Minutes later, Doan stopped a man fitting the description, walking not far from the area.

The girl couldn't positively identify him, she said. She had "a gut feeling" it was him. In fact, she was almost sure, but "he had his face covered," she said. The suspect was already on file at the station, and Doan did not have probable cause to arrest him.

"This really bugs me. I'm gonna be depressed all night because of this," he said as he drove away.

Two-day open house set in Chicago

A team of specialists from SIU-C will conduct a two-day "Open House on the Road" for prospective students in Chicago and its surrounding areas.

The program for prospective students will be from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Feb. 9 and 10 at the Hilton Inn, 3003 Corporate West Drive, Lisle, Ill.

Admission standards, housing and financial aid opportunities and other essentials will be discussed.

For additional information contact Deborah Perry, Program Director, School College Relations Division, Office of Admissions and Records, at (618) 453-4381 or (Illinois only) toll-free 800-642-3531.

Students, RSOs urged to observe Southernfest IV

By Steve Serrot
Student Writer

Students at SIU-C will have a chance to see what various Registered Student Organizations have to offer when Southernfest IV kicks off Friday in the Student Center Ballroom D.

Southernfest IV, scheduled from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., is a student activities fair which gives the RSOs a chance to let students know they are there and that there is an interest group for everyone.

Sponsored by the Student Orientation Committee, Southernfest IV is open to all RSOs. Gail Fischer, programming chairwoman for the SOC, said the design of the fair is to "stay away from the traditional information table open house and to develop some type of creative and fun activity."

Fischer said that most students at the University don't know about the many different groups. The RSOs range from professional or social groups to sports and recreational clubs.

TITLE IX: Moving toward equity

Men, said, "The core of the dissatisfaction of male coaches with Title IX was that they resented the fact that all at once everything was going to be taken care of for the women. Yet, probably not one in 20 resent women's athletics. Nearly all support the idea that young ladies have as much right to be in athletics as males do."

BUT IT WAS NOT until April 1978, almost to the compliance deadline, that the University formed a committee to look into Title IX compliance. That year the IAW budget portion rose to a still inequitable 18 percent of the athletics budget.

Although allocation of student fees is not directly encompassed by Title IX, SIUC students voted in 1978 to split student athletics fees equally between men's and women's programs.

In May 1979, 13 former Saluki women athletes and one graduate assistant filed a 24-page complaint with the OCR against SIUC for alleged violations of the Title IX law. SIUC was not alone.

"The OCR had a huge waiting list and had to do at least 10 investigations before they came here," Nancy Bandy, assistant director of IAW, said. OCR finally investigated the complaint in 1982.

"WHEN THEY came they looked at everything, not just what was in the complaint," Bandy said. "After they investigated, they called in January to tell us what we had to do. From January to May in 1983 we negotiated. We submitted the plan in June.

"They said, 'because you have this plan, you're in compliance.' If the University would've said, 'take your findings and stick it' there would've been some problems. The threat was there," Bandy said.

No university has yet had federal funds taken away because of Title IX regulations. But much concern arose when the Supreme Court ruled in the Grove City College case in 1984 that federal funds could only be revoked in the specific program of violation, not from a whole institution.

"As soon as the Grove City College Case happened, they suspended 14 investigations," Bandy said.

A bill to overturn the Grove City College decision, known as the Civil Rights Restoration Act of 1985, was recently introduced in Congress.

"If this law passes, the OCR will have to resume those investigations. They hadn't even touched the high schools yet. Fortunately, they got to us before that happened," Bandy said.

Carbondale tape company thrives on sticky business

By Margaret Callcott
Staff Writer

Most SIU-C students probably haven't looked beyond the tape that holds their torn notes together or keeps their posters on the wall. If they did, they might discover that Carbondale has more than the average college-town supply of tape; it has a tape company.

Tuck Industries Inc., at 600 N. Illinois Ave., manufactures "thousands of kinds" of tape, according to Personnel Manager Michele Pollock. These "thousands" actually include six chief varieties of tape products: cellophane, filament, paper, specialty, cloth and electrical tapes.

The tape is distributed to buyers from warehouses all over the United States, Pollock said. Tuck Tape has contracts with the government and several distributors in Canada, as well as local contracts with K-Mart and Hallmark.

Tuck Industries Inc. is a subsidiary of the Technical Tape Corporation, which began in 1943. Its headquarters are in New Rochelle, N.Y.

The Tuck company began operations in Carbondale in 1961 with a grant from the Area Redevelopment Administration (now called the Economic Development Administration), acquired through the efforts of Southern Illinois Inc. and the Carbondale Industrial Commission.

Tuck Industries owns the building in which it is located, and the land used for a parking lot next to the company. Recently, 84,000 square feet of production space was added, giving the company a total of 334,000 square feet.

Ten departments are each responsible for a step in a tape's production process, Pollock said.

The saturator department saturates raw paper with chemicals to make it strong enough to go through the rest of the tape-making process. This department is for masking tape only, since other kinds of tape are strong enough already.

The coating department, for all tapes, coats the paper with adhesive and releasing agents so the tape will unroll without sticking. The tape is wound into huge rolls. These rolls are then run through a series of razors in the slitting department, where the tape is cut to different lengths and wound onto cardboard cores.

One department makes the cores, which come in different sizes and widths. The plastic dispensers used in retail packaging are made in the injection molding department.

The bulk packaging department packages rolls of tape for the government and other bulk-rate purchasers. The retail packaging department puts tape into dispensers, which are then attached to cardboard backings.

Any defective tape is sent to the rewind department, where machines unwind it and correct the problem.

Tuck Tape has two production companies in New York, one in Canada and one in England. The Carbondale company is the largest of the five.

Pollock said that Tuck Industries is the largest employer in Jackson County (550 employees) other than Southern Illinois University.

"In the past three years we have been the only company not to lay people off," she said. "While everyone else was laying people off, we were hiring."

Although Tuck Industries does use computers for warehousing, shipping and handling orders, Pollock said that much of the company is still physically operated.

"I'm sure we're not doing things like we were 20 years ago," she said.

Men's track squad ready for rematch against Illinois

By Mike Frey
Sports Editor

The SIU-C men's track and field team will travel north to Champaign on Saturday with a score to settle.

The Salukis will compete against Illinois, Purdue and Michigan in a quadrangular meet. It will be the second time they have faced Illinois, which won the six-team Missouri Invitational last week with 98 points. SIU-C finished third with 84 points.

Coach Bill Cornell said the Salukis could have beaten the Illini if they had received better performances in a few events. He said his team is capable of defeating Illinois this week.

"If things happen right we can beat them," Cornell said. "Track meets are like basketball and football games in that the bounce of the ball often makes the difference. If we had gotten a few breaks, we could have beat them last week."

Cornell said Purdue and Michigan will play a crucial role in the meet. Like many of the opponents SIU-C has faced this season, Cornell said he knows very little about either team.

"We don't know if Michigan or Purdue is going to take away some of our points or some of Illinois'," Cornell said. "They may split evenly between us. It should be a pretty balanced meet with three good track schools to compete against."

Snow and poor weather has hindered the Salukis' practice this week and Cornell said this could affect the team on Saturday. Only the distance runners have practiced outside.

"We have to be very careful," Cornell said. "Our distance runners are still going outside, but they can't go as fast as they like. They have to watch their footing all the time to avoid falling."

"The only place the sprinters can run is the pathway under the (McAndrew) stadium. It's not as long a track as we want but we have to adjust."

Cornell will use primarily the same lineup that competed at Missouri, although he has made changes in some events.

Freshman Connor Mason will run in the 440-yard dash for the first time and Rohan Stoby will see action in the 600-yard run. Richard McDonnell will compete in the 880-yard run. Cornell said he made the changes to improve team speed in these events.

World-class sprinter Michael Franks will once again be expected to be the Salukis' top scorer. Franks, who is suffering from a minor groin injury, will compete in the 60-yard dash, the 300-yard dash and the mile relay.

Cornell said Franks wants to avenge his loss to Illinois' Lester Washington in the 60-yard dash last week. Franks led through most of the race before Washington edged him at the finish line.

"Michael told me he feels like he can get Washington this week," Cornell said. "Yesterday was his first day of training this week, but he's feeling a little better each week."

Cornell also expects the mile relay team to perform well this week. The group of Franks, freshman Steve Breathett, Mike Elliott and Mark Hill won the event last week with a time of 3:16.45. Cornell plans to use the same quartet this week.

The Salukis will compete in the Domino Pizza Classic at Champaign next Saturday. As many as 60 teams will compete in the unscored meet and Cornell said the opportunity to compete at Illinois should help SIU-C the following week.

"We hope this meet will give us a chance to get into better shape," he said. "The Domino Classic is an unscored meet so it'll give us a chance to qualify some individuals for the NCAA championships."

Riggins treats capitol to 'memorable night'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many people may be tongue-tied when they meet a Supreme Court justice, but not Washington Redskins' fullback John Riggins. "Come on Sandy baby, loosen up. You're too tight," he admonished Sandra Day O'Connor.

The 240-pound football player also slept on the floor for an hour as Vice President George Bush spoke to 1,300 people at the Washington Press Club's annual salute to Congress on Wednesday night.

Riggins was later helped from the room by two editors of People magazine who had been seated at his table.

Douglas Woloshin, Riggins' agent, said he spoke to the player Thursday, and "he said he had a good time — a very nice time, in fact."

One of those at Riggins' table, People's Washington bureau chief Garry Clifford, confirmed that Riggins told Mrs. O'Connor, "Come on Sandy baby, loosen up. You're too tight."

Ms. Clifford said the justice laughed and appeared not to be insulted.

Associated Press photographer Ron Edmonds said he stepped over somebody sprawled on the floor at the end of the evening, not recognizing the person as Riggins.

"They took him out the VIP door," said Edmonds. "They were dragging him, feet behind." He said the person being dragged was mumbling incoherently.

Virginia Gov. Charles Robb, who was also at the table, said it was "definitely a memorable evening."

Ms. Clifford said that earlier in the evening, Riggins, who has chronic back problems, had said he was in pain.

Later, as eight freshmen members of Congress were being introduced, Riggins fell asleep, said a witness who asked not to be identified.

The witness said Riggins slept for about an hour next to her table.

But Ms. Clifford said Riggins "was just taking a rest on the floor for a few minutes."

Riggins slept until Bush finished speaking, said the source.

Women gymnasts to challenge Indiana State

By Stan Goff
Staff Writer

The Saluki women's gymnastics team will be looking for its second straight triumph when they host Indiana State University Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Arena.

Last Sunday's 176.20 to 174.05 victory over Northern Illinois University left coach Herb Vogel's squad with a 1-1 record and a chance to go over the .500 mark with a win over the Sycamores.

In its win over the Huskies, SIU-C was led by sophomore all-arounder Jennifer Moore, who scored 35.90 points in the four events. Vogel is hoping that Moore can recover from the flu to turn in another strong performance for the Salukis.

"She's missed a couple of days of practice, but she's feeling better today, and I'm hoping to have my top four all-arounders healthy this weekend," Vogel said.

Vogel has other injury questions, as juniors Lori Steele, Gina Hey and Margaret Callcott have all had injuries in the past two weeks. Steele, one of the team's top all-arounders, missed the NIU meet because of a sore ankle and Callcott will be limited to the uneven parallel bars on Sunday because of a sprained ankle she suffered while working on a new dismount this week.

Hey, who placed second in the all-around against the Huskies with a score of 35.85, has been bothered by a pulled stomach muscle, but Vogel expects her to be ready for the ISU meet.

"We're looking to improve our team score a little and I think we can because we didn't have a bad workout situation this week. I look for the team to get better with each meet," Vogel said.

The Salukis strongest events against NIU were the vault and the floor exercise, where they scored 44.85. Moore scored a 9.55 to win the vaulting title and Michelle Spillman scored a 9.50 on the floor. Vogel expects tight matchups between SIU-C and the Sycamores, especially in these two events.

"The meet could be very close. They have two good vaulters and a strong beam team, and we'll have to do a good job to beat them. The floor exercise should be real close because they have real good dancers and we have better tumblers," Vogel said.

SIU-C will need help from Maggi Nidiffer, Joanne Oppenheim and freshmen Gretchen Koeppe-Baker, Diana Cook and Nancy Sanchez if they are to knock off ISU.

publicity, probably because of the year Xavier is having, but he is also having a very fine season," Shore said.

Santos, a 6-foot-7, 225-pound forward, has overcome an early-season back problem and is averaging 10.3 points and 5.8 rebounds. He was runner-up to Saluki center Kenny Perry last season as the MVC's Newcomer of the Year.

Arline is averaging 4.5 points and has added 44 assists. The 6-foot-9 Carr, the younger brother of former Shocker All-American Antoine Carr, is averaging 7.4 points and 5.3 rebounds.

The Shockers top reserves off the bench are guard-forward Karl Papke (4.4 points per game) and freshmen Clint Normore, Cedric Coleman and Curtis Bailey.

"I think we have to contain Perry although he's not playing like they would like him to play," Shore said. "He played well against us last year and (Nate) Bufford and (Roy) Birch also had good games against us last year."

Perry averaged 13.4 points and 6.6 rebounds last year for the Salukis. But this season his season averages have slipped to 12.0 points and 5.5 rebounds.

Last year through 18 games, the Salukis had a 5-2 record in the MVC and were 13-5 overall.

But this season the Salukis have slipped to 1-6 in the MVC and 9-9 overall through Thursday's game with Illinois State, despite having almost the same cast of players from a year ago.

SIU-C coach Allen Van Winkle said Tuesday that there are three reasons why the Salukis record has slipped this season.

"The teams have got better in the league this season, and we've had a very tough conference schedule this year," he said. "We've already played Tulsa twice, and we've played on the road four times in addition to that."

"The third thing is our depth inside probably has taken a step back from a year ago in terms of the number of people we have with size that can play defense and give us some productivity."

The Salukis will face the Shockers in back-to-back games. After Saturday's game, SIU-C will travel to Wichita State the following Thursday and will play at West Texas State the following Saturday.

Men gymnasts guarding against possible letdown

By Stan Goff
Staff Writer

After facing the top two teams in the country the last two weeks, the SIU-C men's gymnastics team has to guard against possible letdown Sunday when the Salukis host Indiana State University at the Arena.

Coach Bill Meade's team opened the regular season with a loss to second-ranked Ohio State and then fell to No. 1 Penn State last week in a triangular meet. SIU-C, 1-2, did defeat Indiana State at the triangular meet in University Park, Pa.

"We've had a good week of practices and we should just go out and improve our score. I'm looking for as much as a two-point improvement," Meade said.

The Salukis scored 275.15 in their meet with OSU, and 275.50 against the Nittany Lions. The Sycamores scored 267.95 while placing third in the triangular meet.

"They've (ISU) been scoring around 269, but they're capable of going higher. If they have a good meet, it could be interesting. But then again, we're also capable of going higher," Meade said.

The Salukis are averaging over 46 points in four events, with the vault (46.69) being their strongest event, and the pommel horse (43.09) their weakest.

Brendan Price won the vaulting competition in last week's triangular meet with a score of 9.75, and his 9.60 average is one of the best in the country. Mark Ulmer, with a 9.48 average, Lawrence Williamson and Preston Knauf give the Salukis three additional solid vaulters.

ISU's Carlos Silvestre (9.35) and Alfred Mitchell (9.30) each scored high on the vault last weekend.

With All-American candidate Lawrence Williamson leading the way, SIU-C has also been strong on the floor exercise, averaging 46.25 points a meet. Williamson is averaging 9.69 on the floor, and has finished first at the Big Eight and Windy City Invitationals, and at the meets with Ohio State, Penn State and Indiana State.

Price has a season high of 9.60 on the floor, and Ulmer, Gregg Upperman and David Lutterman have all averaged 9.10 or better for the Salukis. Silvestre scored a 9.40, and Mitchell a 9.25 in the floor exercise last week for ISU, and Meade says that Silvestre is one of the top floor men in the country.

"Lawrence could be tested by Carlos (Silvestre). He didn't have a real good meet at Penn State, but he's definitely a 9.7 guy," Meade said.

Upperman, who was the Salukis' top all-arounder last week with a 54.80, leads the team with a 9.45 average on the still rings. He scored a 9.50 in the triangular meet, and Lutterman added a 9.45. Rob Klawitter scored a 9.55 for the Sycamores, while Ulmer and Kenneth Clark each scored 9.20 for SIU-C.

Price, a junior out of San Antonio, Texas, is leading the Salukis on the parallel bars with a 9.38 average.

meter sprint freestyle and is the fastest man in Big Ten history. The Hawkeyes also have a slight advantage in the individual medley.

"This one will really go down to the wire," Ingram said. "I don't think the winner will be definite until the last relay ends. It should be that close.

All the swimmers are looking forward to this meet. They're psyched and ready."

Ingram hopes to gain a win for his three seniors, team captain Phil Wittry, Chris Shaw and Jim Griffith.

"What a sendoff it would be if we won their last home dual," Ingram said.

He also would like to see

Tom Hakanson, Hans Kroes and Erwin Kratz qualify and join teammates Gary Brinkman and Anders Grillhammer at the NCAA Championships at the University of Texas in March.

Iowa is also strong in diving and men's diving coach Dennis Golden is pointing to freshman Chad Lucero to pull through and score high.

Petra Jackson leaps for a rebound during the women cagers' game against Eastern Illinois last Saturday. Jackson is leading SIU-C in rebounding with an average of 5.8 rebounds per game. She is also leading the Salukis in scoring with a 19.2 average. SIU-C will play at Wichita State Saturday night.

Big Ten ends TV contract

SCHAUMBURG (AP) — The Big Ten Conference will assume production responsibilities for televising the rest of its 1985 league basketball games, Commissioner Wayne Duke said Thursday.

The Big Ten will produce its first shows Saturday, televising the Michigan-Wisconsin and Michigan State-Northwestern games, Duke said.

The conference has severed its ties with the MetroSports Television Network of New Kensington, Pa., due to the basketball-game syndicator's failure to pay rights fees for the 1985 Big Ten basketball season, the league office announced.

Financial details were not disclosed.

Officials at MetroSports said they were losing "substantial" amounts of money on the Big Ten contract and had been attempting to renegotiate their agreement with the league. The company televised 13 of the 30 games to be broadcast this season, said MetroSports attorney Tom Betz.

The league's "unwillingness to face reality" about declining television ratings for Big Ten basketball led to the renegotiation efforts and finally to the league's termination of the contract Thursday, Betz said.

Men swimmers set for showdown with Iowa

By Tony Paige
Staff Writer

The water will heat up Sunday afternoon when the men's swim team clashes with the Iowa Hawkeyes in the Salukis' last home dual meet of the season at the Recreation Center pool at 1 p.m.

"This is the most important dual meet of the season," men's swim coach Doug Ingram said.

How important?
Both teams are ranked in the Top 20, both are close in proximity and both are interested in the same recruits. A win against Iowa could aid SIU-C's chances of attracting some of those swimmers. Pride is on the line for both teams at this meet. Iowa would hate to lose to a Missouri Valley Conference team and SIU-C would love to beat a Big Ten team, Ingram said.

"This is the seventh time we've competed against Iowa," Ingram said. "Last year we finished 12th in the nation, they ended up 20th. They finished 10th two years ago. They're tough."

Two of the last four years the Hawkeyes have won the Big Ten conference championship.

Not only is there a rivalry between the two schools, but also the coaches. While coaching Indian River Community College in Fort Pierce, Fla., Ingram passed Iowa coach Glen Patton's junior college record of four title winning seasons and raised the mark to five. Patton set the mark as coach of Alfred Tech Community College in New York State. This is his ninth year at Iowa.

"I think there's a little something added to this meet seeing as the two winningest coaches in junior college history are meeting at the four-year level," Ingram said.

The teams are pretty evenly matched, Ingram said. The Salukis are good in the backstroke, breaststroke and butterfly but Iowa has greater depth.

"They could score enough points and not win one event, yet win the meet. What matters is how many points we have when that final race is finished," Ingram said.

A big Iowa asset is Tom Williams, called the fastest man afloat by Ingram. Williams' specialty is the 50-

Cage men upset Redbirds

Saluki center Kenny Perry played like a man possessed Thursday night against the Illinois State Redbirds at the Arena.

Perry scored 18 points and pulled down a season-high 12 rebounds to lead the Salukis to a 63-50 upset victory over the Redbirds. Perry was supported by forwards Bernard Campbell and Cleveland Bibbins, who added 13 and 12 points, respectively.

The Salukis trailed 14-7 early in the game, but they took a 33-30 halftime lead behind 11 first-half points by Campbell.

Illinois State forward Rickie Johnson scored on a reverse layup to give the Redbirds their only lead of the second half at 40-39 with 12:10 remaining, before the Salukis took charge. SIU-C never trailed after point guard Roy Birch scored on a five-footer to give them a 41-40 lead with 12:10 remaining.

The Salukis used a lightning-quick fast break and an aggressive man-to-man defense to outscore the Redbirds 24-10 down the stretch. Perry, Birch and guard Nate Bufford each scored six points in that streak.

Birch added eight points for the Salukis, who improved to 2-6 in the Missouri Valley Conference and 10-9 overall.

Men cagers want to cool hot Shockers

By Steve Kotlos
Staff Writer

Many people were surprised when Wichita State, picked to finish second in the pre-season Missouri Valley Conference media poll, started the year with a 3-6 record.

But the Shockers have started to live up to their pre-season expectations, winning seven out of their last nine games to improve to 10-8 overall and 6-1 in the MVC through Thursday's game with Indiana State.

The Shockers, who are in second place in the MVC behind Tulsa, face the Salukis on Saturday at the Arena. Tip-off is 2:35 p.m.

Wichita assistant coach Rick Shore said the reason for the Shockers' slow start was their youth.

"We're very young at the beginning of the season with three sophomores in our starting lineup and only one returning starter from last year," Shore said.

"We're also shooting poor from the field and from the free throw line and it took time for us to find a point guard. But Mike Arline has settled down our offense at the point, and Henry Carr has come a long way at center."

While the three sophomores consisting of Arline, Carr and forward Gus Santos are playing well, the heart of the Shockers' offense is All American candidate Xavier McDaniel and guard Aubrey Sherrod.

McDaniel, a 6-foot-8, 205-pound senior forward, is the second leading scorer (27.3 points per game) and rebounder (14.7) in the nation. He was named the MVC Player of the Week after scoring 81 points and pulling down 35 rebounds last week in victories over Creighton and West Texas State.

"He has improved in every game and that is the great thing about Xavier McDaniel," Shore said. "Xavier is probably one of the hardest workers in the nation and I definitely think he has a good chance to go high in the (NBA) draft."

While McDaniel has presented problems for opposing teams from the inside, the 6-foot-4 Sherrod has been filling it up from the outside. He is averaging 17.7 points and leads the team in assists with 75.

"He's not getting as much

Women cagers have score to settle with Wichita State

By Anita J. Stoner
Staff Writer

Saturday night, the SIU-C women's basketball team will have a chance to gain revenge against Wichita State, the team which played spoiler last year when it ruined the Salukis' Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference title hopes with a 76-63 upset in Henry Levitt Arena.

"We've never won in Levitt Arena. I don't feel good about going there, they play well at home," Saluki Coach Cindy Scott said. "I hope we break the trend and win at Wichita, but it's going to be a difficult task for us."

Scott does not think history will have as much effect on her young Saluki team as it will for the Shockers.

"I suspect Wichita will dig those films out and show them to the players to boost their confidence," Scott said.

Scott said the two keys to the Shocker attack are Jenny Parr and Allison Daniel. Parr, a forward, is hitting 13.5 points per game and Daniel, a guard, averages 18.2 points per game. Center Terria Dawson has helped the Shocker rebound averages climb to the top of the Gateway Conference, although their 2-5 record is near the cellar of the GAC.

Scott would like for Bridgett Bonds and Mary Berghuis to repeat their second half success of last week's Eastern Illinois game against Wichita State.

"I think our big people have got to be able to put the ball in the hole. We're fortunate that we have five who can and on any night all five can get it done for us," Scott said.

Scott has been pleased with the play of the Saluki reserves recently.

"We had a super game out of (Cozette) Wallace. (Tami) Sanders and (Linda) Wilson can get the job done too," Scott said.

All Gateway attention will be focused on the clash between number one Illinois State and second place Drake Saturday night.

"That should be a great one. Too bad they both can't lose," Scott said.

With any luck, the third place Salukis could pull within a game of the leaders.

"We're young and we've played some very tough teams. To have an 11-5 record and have a chance to build on that is certainly very good," Scott said.

Scott also thinks it possible to win the conference with two losses.

Women cagers defeat Bears

By Anita J. Stoner
Staff Writer

The Saluki women's basketball team rallied in the second half to beat Southwest Missouri State 64-58 in Springfield, Mo., Thursday night.

"We were very lethargic in the first half. We were a half step behind the whole way and too many turnovers kept us from getting into our offense," Saluki Coach Cindy Scott said.

Strong performances from SIU-C players Petra Jackson and Marj Berghuis helped lift the Salukis past the 31-29 halftime deficit. Marialice Jenkins led the pace with seven assists, two steals and just one turnover in the second half. Cozette Wallace came off the bench to help increase the Saluki lead in the final 20 minutes.

Sharon Zeilmann, the Bears 6-foot-4 inch center, hurt the Salukis inside during the first half with nine points and blocked four shots.

Scott switched to a 2-3 zone in the second half to keep the ball away from Zeilmann and Jeanette Tendai, who had been very active in the lane. Zeilmann was held to just two more points, but she blocked two more shots for her career high.

"Southwestern is a very scrappy team. They impressed me with their effort," Scott said.

The Salukis built their biggest leads of 10 points with 11:37 and 8:36 left. The Bears pulled within four in the closing minutes.
